1. In honor of the formation of the new government a three-day holiday was declared for Tientsin with parades and continuous celebration. New flags had to be displayed by all stores and business offices.
2. A member of each Chinese family was required to take part in each parade.
3. At public meetings and during parades the USSR flag was prominently displayed as were pictures of MAO Tse-tung and Stalin side by side. Representatives of the USSR came from Peiping to speak at public meetings. Concern was expressed by some Chinese that a picture of Stalin was displayed above those of Chinese Communist leaders.
4. Pictures were not allowed to be taken without permits, which were impossible to obtain. One American was arrested for taking pictures; his film was confiscated and he was later released.
