1. A small hydroelectric plant, which was supposed to have been completed in 1949, is under construction at Mlini, a small village nine kilometers south of Dubrovnik. The plant will supply Dubrovnik and vicinity with sufficient electric power for industry and electric lighting. Because the water from the natural well has to be diverted in summer for irrigation purposes, the plant will only be able to supply electricity in the winter months.
2. So far, only the buildings, the basin, and all the earthworks have been completed. The generators and turbines, which were to be supplied by Czechoslovakia, are currently being constructed in the Rade Koncar factory in Zagreb and in the Litostroj Combine in Ljubljana.
