1. Source states that Andrei Kilocho, who had been assisting Aleksandr Berezin, the Soviet Commercial Attache in Beirut, was transferred to the Soviet Legation proper as a First Secretary on 20 January 1951. Source adds that he has been told by a qualified informant that Kilocho will be working on "political matters."
2. Source states that the new TASS correspondent in Beirut, replacing Aleksandr Sergeev, is J. Stovbun, who has already joined the Foreign Press Association in Beirut.
3. A well-placed informant states that Stovbun has just arrived in Beirut from Moscow. He states that Stovbun is married and that his wife is very young. According to the informant, she has just completed her university studies, and intends to perfect her French while in Lebanon. The informant states that Stovbun and his wife intend to establish many contacts with the Lebanese and will do a large amount of entertaining. The Stovbuns will live in Sergeev's former apartment, in which the TASS office itself is also located.
4. The same informant has observed that Stovbun speaks French well, but does not seem to be able to speak Arabic. According to this informant, Stovbun is ethnically a "Russian type" and is "almost as likeable as Sergeev."

25X1A  [redacted] Comment. Sergeyev's return to Moscow was apparently delayed beyond the date of his reported recall (see [redacted]), for it was reported by a fairly reliable source that Sergeyev was in Lebanon on 21 January 1951. 25X1A

25X1A  [redacted] Comment. Despite the variation in first initials, this would appear to be the Ivan Stovbun reported in [redacted] 25X1A
