Results of the latest Sino-Soviet conference in Peiping are as follows:

- a. The Chinese and Korean Communists will not stop the Korean conflict, regardless of peace moves by the United Nations (UN). The Soviets are responsible for the supplying of large quantities of munitions necessary to maintain the struggle.
- b. The Soviets will form an international volunteer army including Soviets and other Europeans as reserves, with the stipulation that they will not leave Chinese territory in order to avoid international incidents.
- c. The Soviets are responsible for the construction of defense fortifications on the Sino-Korean border, the South China coast and in the Northwest and Southwest.
- d. The Soviets will send troops to China for defense of the Korean border. If UN troops cross the border the Soviet troops will engage them. If, on the contrary, the UN troops are pushed out of Korea, the Soviets will strike Japan.
- e. The Chinese Communists will train a reserve of 5,000,000 men against a third world war. Two million will be trained within six months to replace Korean casualties. All will be Soviet-equipped.
- f. According to a military agreement, the Soviets and Chinese will coordinate all action. In Asia the Chinese will be responsible, and will supply the manpower while the Soviets give the material. In Europe the Soviets will carry on by themselves. Thus tension will be maintained throughout the world by the Communist front.
- g. At present the top strategy is to absorb as many Americans as possible in Korea by continued pressure or threat.

[REDACTED] Comment. See [REDACTED] and all referenced reports. It would appear doubtful that informant had access to detailed information on high-level Sino-Soviet decisions, and this would appear to be largely derived from rumors started by widespread speculation on future Sino-Soviet moves in Korea.
