1. In early December 1951, the Chinese Communist Party central authorities ordered the Municipal Committee for Peiping to select five cadre personnel, who had had extensive guerrilla experience and were qualified in organization work, for assignment to the People's Volunteer Army Headquarters. The cadre personnel chosen reported to Chinese Communist Army Headquarters for orders on 10 December.
2. The North Korean People's Army Headquarters requested guerrilla cadre personnel from the People's Volunteer Army Headquarters to help organize and train guerrilla bands for infiltration and sabotage duties in South Korea as soon as a cease-fire agreement is reached. As of 14 December a total of 34, including the five above, had been drafted.
3. One guerrilla training base is believed to be at Chiuningp'u (九寧浦)<sup>1</sup> in North Korea near the Yalu.
