F. Chinese Democratic Party (Kyung Ko Min Kyu Tong Mong Hui):<sup>1</sup> Established in Burma about 1 January 1948 as a branch of the same party in China. The Rangoon office is at 16th Street and serves as a Central Board in association with various other local Chinese associations. When the Chinese Communist Government received official recognition from the Government of Burma (GOB) on 17 December 1949, the Party was instructed by its headquarters and by the Chinese Communist Government to look after all the property owned by that Government in Burma. Since then, the party has functioned as a contact with the GOB in arranging meetings and holding receptions on behalf of its own diplomats. The role played by the Tong Mong Hui is no less important than that of the Chinese Embassy in Rangoon. It performs such work as intelligence operations, propaganda, and the job of winning the local Chinese population over to the Chinese Communist Government. It performs the work which the Chinese Embassy cannot officially do, i.e., intelligence operations, propaganda, and winning the support of the local Chinese population for the Chinese Communist Government.
