

Subject
F 37788 25X1A2g

COUNTRY: Mozambique/Portugal/UK/Angola
SUBJECT: Effects of Portuguese and English Acculturation on a Bantu Tribe
PLACE ACQUIRED: [Redacted]
DATE ACQUIRED: [Redacted] 25X1A6a
DATE OF INFO: 1954 et ante
25X1X6

PROCESSED

1. It seems that it is very difficult, if not impossible, to find clans from the same tribe, one of which keeps the traditional culture, while others are differently acculturated by Portuguese and by English people. But it should be possible to find people of one tribe who are affected by the Portuguese and by the English cultures. Then it will be possible to study in some individuals what will not be possible to study in communities.
2. However, the Portuguese from Mozambique seem to be themselves rather influenced by the British, in many ways, and especially in what concerns race relations. While the Portuguese generally speaking have no race prejudice, those of South Africa who are in direct contact with British culture, seem not to be free from the same prejudice that we know is very strong in British South Africa. In this case I will not expect to observe such a striking difference in the Bantus who have been in contact with Portuguese or with British people. But a difference should be evident and after our work is completed in East South Africa, it will be interesting to observe the same influences in Bantus from Angola, where the Portuguese culture is more preserved from the British race prejudice influence.

-end-

25X1X6

18 Feb 54

This unevaluated information for US Officials Only is supplied for the possible interest of your analysts. It does not warrant dissemination by [Redacted]

TYPE ACT-DATE INFO-TFR-DATE AREA

Subject
Anthropology file
& native tribes
65-45.3

area
Angola
188
U. of S. Africa
264

for both areas
16 54 - -

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

MAR 2 1954