Admiral Bobby R. Inman
Deputy Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Admiral <sup>Bobby</sup>~~Inman~~:

Recently, the NAS received a copy of a working paper on the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA) prepared by staff of the Central Intelligence Agency. After carefully reviewing its contents, we believe that the working paper does not accurately reflect the current activities and staff of the Institute. Moreover, we believe that there have been important developments bearing on the Institute and its work that would be germane to the assessment of its value to the United States.

As the U.S. National Member Organization in IIASA, we are seriously concerned that the Agency's report on the Institute should be as accurate and current as possible. In order to best serve the national interest we believe the working paper should be updated to include all relevant information on the present situation at the Institute. We would hope that this review would include contributions from individuals who are familiar with the current staff, work, and facilities of, as well as with the views of our Western partners in IIASA.

Since the governing Council of the Academy and its Commission on International Relations will be considering the future relationship of the Academy to IIASA during their forthcoming meetings in February, we are anxious that an updated report be prepared by early February, if at all possible. To this end, the Academy is prepared to assist the Agency in any way you may deem appropriate and useful.

Yours sincerely,

Frank Press
President
