CRIMINAL PENALTIES FOR THE UNAUTHORIZED
DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION IDENTIFYING
CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS ENGAGED OR ASSISTING IN FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Successful and efficiently conducted foreign intelligence activities are essential to the national security of the United States. These depend in large part upon concealment of relationships between components of the United States Government that carry out those activities, and certain of their employees and other persons. The disclosure of such relationships to unauthorized persons is detrimental to the successful and efficient conduct of foreign intelligence and counterintelligence activities. Individuals who have a concealed relationship with foreign intelligence components of the United States may be exposed to physical danger if their identities are disclosed to unauthorized persons.

The entire Membership of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence has introduced H.R. 5615, the "Intelligence Identities Protection Act" to deal with the serious problem of unauthorized disclosure of information identifying certain individuals engaged or assisting in foreign intelligence activities.

This is a carefully crafted and narrowly drawn bill which comes to grips with the full extent of the problem by providing criminal penalties for anyone who makes the proscribed unauthorized disclosure, providing he acts "with intent to impair or impede the foreign intelligence activities of the United States." The bill specifically protects disclosures to the two intelligence oversight committees.

The bill thus provides an urgently needed deterrent without impairing legitimate exercise of civil and Constitutional rights or interfering with Congressional oversight. The HPSCI has scheduled hearings on the bill for 30 and 31 January.

Letters

To Stop Those Who Would Cripple U.S. Intelligence

To the Editor:

A Jan. 2 Op-Ed article by William H. Schaap severely criticized the Intelligence Identities Protection Act, which I and the other 13 members of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence introduced last October. The bill, H.R. 5815, would establish criminal penalties for the unauthorized disclosure of the identities of certain United States intelligence officers operating under cover overseas.

It is understandable that Mr. Schaap is concerned about the proposed legislation: He is co-editor of the Covert Information Bulletin, whose avowed purpose is to blow the cover of every C.I.A. officer working overseas.

He contends that H.R. 5815 is "unnecessary and unwise." I disagree. If we assume, as I do, that it is proper for the country to possess an effective clandestine intelligence-collection service, then such legislation must be viewed as extremely necessary.

The operating heart of any such service is the use of undercover agents and officers overseas to collect intelligence information. Obviously, if the names of these people are spread upon the public record, their usefulness is ended and the effectiveness of the clandestine service is destroyed.

In my opinion and, I think, in the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the American people, unauthorized disclosure of the names of undercover intelligence agents is a misguided act that serves no useful informing function whatsoever. It does not alert us to abuses; it does not bring clarity to issues of national policy; it does not enlighten public debate, and it does not contribute one iota to the goal of an educated and informed electorate. What it does do is place lives in danger and cripple our efforts to collect timely and accurate intelligence, the sine qua non for the effective conduct of foreign affairs.

Whatever the motives of those engaged in such activity, the only result is the complete disruption of our legitimate intelligence-collection programs — programs that bear the imprimatur of the Congress, the President and the American people. Such a result benefits no one but our adversaries.

Therefore, I am convinced that a legislative response is needed to put a halt to such activity. I agree with Mr. Schaap that legislation in this area "must be strictly limited to protecting what is in fact secret, and to what is in fact damaging to the national security."

I believe the proposed legislation is so limited. It protects the identities of a narrow segment of Government agents — those operating overseas in an undercover capacity on behalf of the C.I.A. or intelligence elements of the Defense Department.

It subjects two groups to possible criminal liability: (1) Those who have had authorized access to classified information containing the identity of undercover agents and then disclose the identity without authority and (2) anyone who discloses it with the specific intent to impair or impede the foreign intelligence activities of the United States.

Mr. Schaap contends that the first provision "would completely stifle criticism and reform from within the intelligence community." This is nonsense. The disclosure of the identity of a specific American agent operating overseas in an undercover capacity for the C.I.A. has no connection whatsoever with the oversight of our intelligence agencies.

Mr. Schaap further states that the second provision "would eliminate scrutiny from the outside." He characterizes the specific-intent requirement as a "smokescreen." He chooses to overlook the burden placed on the Government to prove this intent beyond a reasonable doubt from facts and circumstances other than the actual disclosure.

In closing, I would note that the Legislation Subcommittee of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence has scheduled public hearings on this subject for Jan. 29 and 30. The committee looks forward to full and frank public discussions of the important issues involved as an aid to its goal of enacting a statute that will protect both intelligence officers and our constitutional guarantees.

The Hughes-Ryan Amendment

The Hughes-Ryan Amendment, §662 of Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 USC §2422):

- establishes a standard ("important to national security of the United States") for Presidential approval of covert actions;
- establishes Congressional reporting requirements.

The operative effect of the amendment's reporting requirement is to make available to eight committees of the Congress, including over 200 Members, detailed information regarding highly sensitive intelligence operations.

Current reporting requirements which dictate proliferation of highly sensitive information are fundamentally at odds with the concept of covert action. The Hughes-Ryan Amendment is redundant now that intelligence oversight functions have been centralized in the two intelligence committees:

- each of the "Hughes-Ryan committees" has representatives on the HPSCI and SSCI. The Appropriations Committees, moreover, are briefed on all releases from the Agency reserve for contingencies;
- Members of the SSCI and HPSCI who also sit on the other "Hughes-Ryan" committees" could keep those committees informed in terms of special activities;
- the Church Committee itself recommended narrowing the reporting requirement so as to leave only the established intelligence oversight committees as recipients of the reports.

Up to now, it has been the Administration's position that Hughes-Ryan should be dealt with in the context of Intelligence Charter Legislation. Given the importance of the issue and the growing urgency surrounding it as well as the likelihood that little progress will be made in the area of Intelligence Charter Legislation in the Second Session of the 96th Congress, however, the Administration is currently re-examining its position.

The attached proposed legislation would deal with Hughes-Ryan by repealing it and substituting new subsection 102(d)(6) in the National Security Act of 1947, which would:

-- re-establish the standard ("important to the national security of the United States") for Presidential approval of special activities;

-- require the President to approve only those special activities of "unusual scope, sensitivity, or risk", thus allowing more routine special activities to be approved via an Executive Branch mechanism other than actual Presidential approval; and,

-- limit the Congressional reporting requirement to the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Sec. 1. Section 102(d) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 402) is amended by adding the following new subsection (e):

(A) No funds appropriated under the authority of this or any other Act may be expended by or on behalf of the Central Intelligence Agency for special activities of unusual scope, sensitivity, or risk, unless and until the President finds that each such activity is important to the national security of the United States and reports, in a timely fashion, a description and scope of the activity to the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the United States House of Representatives and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the United States Senate.

(B) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply during military operations initiated by the United States under a declaration of war approved by the Congress or an exercise of powers by the President under the War Powers Resolution (50 U.S.C. 1541 et seq.).

(C) For the purposes of this subsection, the term 'special activities' means activities conducted abroad in support of national foreign policy objectives which are designed to further official United States programs and policies abroad and which are planned and executed so that the role of the United States Government is not apparent or acknowledged publicly, and functions in support of such activities, but not including diplomatic activity or the collection and production of intelligence or related support functions.

Sec. 2 Section 662 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2422) is repealed.

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION LEGISLATION

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requires that the Central Intelligence Agency review in intimate detail all of the information in its most sensitive files with an eye towards release of all or part of that information.

Although CIA employs existing provisions in the FOIA to deny release of much of the information reviewed, the perception overseas is that the CIA cannot guarantee the protection of information provided by both individual human sources and cooperating foreign intelligence services.

The CIA has, therefore, witnessed an increasing reluctance on the part of clandestine sources of information to be forthcoming and to cooperate fully because of their fear, whether legitimate or not, that the information provided by them, or even their individual identities, could become public knowledge.

The attached proposed amendment to the CIA Act of 1949 would exclude from search, review and release in connection with most FOIA requests the information contained in the most sensitive Intelligence Community files. It would send a clear message to those who cooperate with our country overseas that the United States is concerned about their security and safety.

The amendment would not, on the other hand, deny from review and possible release information which is of a finished intelligence nature. In cases where such information can be properly declassified, it will continue to be released and be of benefit to the American public. Nor would the amendment affect in any way the handling of requests made under the FOIA or Privacy Act by U.S. citizens or permanent resident aliens for information on themselves.

On April 5, 1979 Deputy Director of Central Intelligence Frank Carlucci testified before the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in both open and closed session as to the harmful effects which the FOIA is having on the CIA. More recently, Congressman Richardson Preyer's House Government Operations Subcommittee on Government Information & Individual Rights has invited the CIA to present testimony regarding its problems with the FOIA. Language similar to the attached has been introduced as Section 2 of H.R. 5129 by Congressman Robert McClory.

AMENDMENT TO SECTION 6 OF THE
CIA ACT OF 1949CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW
50 U.S.C. 403g

Changes in existing law are shown as follows: existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman; existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in brackets; and new matter is underscored.

* * * * *

In the interests of the security of the foreign intelligence activities of the United States and in order further to implement the proviso of Section 403(d)(3) of this title that the Director of Central Intelligence shall be responsible for protecting intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure, the Agency shall be exempted from the provisions of [section 654 of Title 5, and the provisions of] any [other] law which require the publication or disclosure of the organization, functions, names, official titles, salaries, or numbers of personnel employed by the Agency. In furtherance of the responsibility of the Director of Central Intelligence to protect intelligence sources and methods, information in files maintained by an intelligence agency or component of the United States Government shall also be exempted from the provisions of any law which require publication or disclosure, or search or review in connection therewith, if such files have been specifically designated by the Director of Central Intelligence to be concerned with: The design, function, deployment, exploitation or utilization of scientific or technical systems for the collection of foreign intelligence or counterintelligence information; Special activities and foreign intelligence or counterintelligence operations; Investigations conducted to determine the suitability of potential foreign intelligence or counterintelligence sources; Intelligence and security liaison arrangements or information exchanges with foreign governments or their intelligence or security services; except to the extent that information on American citizens and permanent resident aliens requested by such persons on themselves, pursuant to Sections 552 and 552a of Title 5, may be contained in such files. The provisions of this Section shall not be superseded except by a provision of law which is enacted after the date of this Amendment and which specifically repeals or modifies the provisions of this Section. [Provided, That in furtherance of this section, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall make no reports to the Congress in connection with the Agency under section 947(b) of Title 5.]

FOREWORD

The conference in which you are about to participate continues an educational endeavor begun some eighteen years ago by The Brookings Institution to meet a continuing need of senior corporate executives. That need, simply stated, is to reassess one's business leadership responsibilities against the broader social, economic, and political issues that confront American society.

Toward that end, the conference is designed to help current and emerging leaders from the national business community acquire balanced perspectives on the operations, problems, and policy issues of the federal government. The program consists of an intensive schedule of informal and off-the-record discussions with a cross-section of legislative and executive officials and with knowledgeable observers of government. Resource leaders are presented, not necessarily to provide answers to the issues discussed, but to stimulate critical thought. Participants are expected to raise and discuss the questions, issues, and problems which they themselves find instructive, significant, or disturbing.

I hope that in exchanging views with resource leaders and your colleagues, you will gain a fuller awareness of the public policy environment in which business is challenged to survive and grow.
