2. The DDI would like to have the Intelligence Directorate offices examine the possible impact on our business assuming the proposed system becomes operational and functions along the lines sketched above. What possibilities or assists do you see coming out of the availability of such a system? How would it affect the responsibilities you now have? What problems of a substantive or organizational nature do you foresee? What guidance or requirements would you like to give to the system designers at this time to enhance the potential usefulness of the system to you as an intelligence producer?

3. In the interest of getting on with the job, I do not propose to call a meeting at this time. Rather I would like to have each office submit its views to me in writing by 31 August. With the office views in, I will decide whether a meeting for further discussion is desirable. In the meantime, if you have any questions please do not hesitate to contact me.

4. I would remind you of [REDACTED]'s word of caution at the end of his briefing: The system does not now carry a special codeword but discussion of it should be confined to those persons in your organization who need to be aware of it at this time.
