Formosa Straits Problem

The Chairman stated that the meeting had been called to consider what action the IAC should take in response to the President's urgent requirement for intelligence coverage of the Formosa Straits problem through one intelligence medium for the duration of the critical situation.

The Chairman circulated for the Committee's consideration a draft proposal for the establishment of an ad hoc IAC Current Intelligence Group for the Formosa Straits Problem.

Considerable discussion followed during which the advantages and disadvantages of various means of complying with the President's directive were examined. The relation of the Group to the IAC, to the Watch Committee of the IAC, to the Indications Center, and to the operating offices of the several member agencies was examined.

The Committee then: (a) agreed to establish an ad hoc IAC Current Intelligence Group; (b) directed that representatives of the members hold an organization meeting the next morning (Saturday, 19 March); and (c) directed that the first situation report be delivered to the White House on Monday, 21 March. (Mr. Sheldon was requested to so notify Colonel Goodpaster.)

Specifically, the Committee agreed that:

- a. An ad hoc IAC Current Intelligence Group on the Formosa Straits problem be established immediately;
- b. it be located in the Indications Center, which shall have administrative and logistical support for its operation;
- c. it be an IAC task group composed of the best intelligence officers on the area to be furnished by the IAC members;
