Thank you for your letter inquiring about the summer intern program. Unfortunately, it is too late for you to be considered for this summer's program.

I have enclosed a description of the graduate studies program. I will look forward to hearing from you again next fall.

Sincerely,

Dear

I am a Junior at Stanford University, and am interested in applying for a summer internship working for your office. I learned of your willingness to help through your listing with the Bowman Alumni Contact Service.

The focus of my major is Development Economics of Less Developed Countries, primarily in Latin America. I eventually plan to work in the Foreign Service or with an international development organization, and this is why I would so love to work for you. I realize that I have not had previous experience in this field, yet I am sure that my research and clerical skills could be of assistance to you. At the same time, I would gain first-hand exposure to policy analysis in this field.

I am eager to hear about what types of internships are available, and look forward to hearing from you at your convenience.

Thank you for your time and consideration!

Sincerely,

STAT
