Briefings

There were 4 briefings on the Hill this past week.

Excellence Follow-On/Employee Morale

Mishandling of a significant cut in the number of employee parking spaces quite literally threatens to undo much if not all of the goodwill generated by the "Excellence" exercise. The cut is larger than people had been led to believe would be the case once construction began. Although support officers were given an explanation, the employee population as a whole remains in the dark about why there has been a cut, why it's larger than they had been led to expect and what is being done to alleviate the problem.

This has always been one of the most significant issues with employees and requires the most deft handling by management. With all of the emphasis on improved communication, management's silence on a matter that affects every employee in the most direct way has not gone unnoticed by the employees. As John Stein told the DDCI, this is a problem everyone is talking about.

I recommend an employee bulletin explaining the situation and laying out alternatives being investigated to provide a remedy. I believe such a bulletin also should announce that arrangements are being made for a couple of shuttle busses to bring people from the far reaches of West parking lot and the new lots to Headquarters building. If I were an employee, I would be contrasting our silence on this issue (and failure to anticipate employee reaction and try to mitigate it) with the various exhortations of the "Excellence" effort.

DCI Weekly Report

Office of the Inspector General

The Office of Finance has prepared a status report on actions being taken as a result of the inspection of that office. We have reviewed this report and are pleased with progress being made to date. There are, however, a few areas which in our opinion still need attention. We will be discussing these areas with the Director of Finance.

DCI WEEKLY

PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

The U.S. News and World Report story on the Agency is about ready to be pulled together. John McMahon will meet with the reporters on Monday, 21 May, when they will give us a chance to comment on their findings.

At the DCI's request, I obtained Leo Cherne's agreement for an interview with the BBC to be aired in a program to be broadcast when the President visits the UK in connection with D Day celebrations. Cherne said the interview, which focused on the many improvements the Agency has made in the DI area, the DCI's role in this and the DCI's background in intelligence extending back to World War II, went well. The BBC is going to try and get Bud McFarlane to discuss covert action.

The announcement of the Agency's transfer of OSS records to National Archives and the availability to scholars and others of the first 198 square feet of material will be made by Archives on 10 June. A letter from the DCI to Senator Durenberger reporting this fact is being prepared by Ken MacDonald and OLL.

The three Cable News Network segments on CIA will air on 21, 22 and 23 May.
