Preface

This quarterly publication is designed to provide timely updates of ongoing active measures campaigns by the USSR and its allies as well as warning of future campaigns. It has three parts:

- Part 1 provides a brief assessment of the major ongoing active measures campaigns worldwide and new developments that we expect in those campaigns in the future.
- Part 2 provides a highlighted assessment of expected new active measures initiatives during the coming months.
- Part 3 is an annotated calendar of key events over the next year that we anticipate will figure prominently in campaigns by the Soviets and their allies.

	Several recent articles in the official Sandinista newspaper Barricada have attempted to link the Vatican with both the CIA and the political right. We expect this campaign to continue for at least the next several months as the regime seeks to discredit the church's voice on the domestic and international political	25X1

Arms Reduction in the Pacific
Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze during his recent visit to Japan indicated that the Soviets might be willing to reduce the number of SS-20s in Asia in exchange for reductions in US F-16s in Japan and Tomahawk missiles in the US Pacific Fleet. Moscow is likely to play up this possibility for Asian audiences to capitalize on strong antinuclear sentiment in Japan and the South Pacific.	25X1
