27 August 1986

Dear General Meyer:

I would like to invite you to participate in a conference that the Office of Soviet Analysis is sponsoring on 29-30 September 1986. Transportation from headquarters, accommodations, and meals will be provided, and you will receive the standard CIA consulting fee [redacted]

STAT

The conference will focus on developments since the mid-1970s that suggest that Soviet thinking on the nature of a future general war is undergoing significant evaluation. We will provide the participants with several papers and briefings that outline the most notable doctrinal and operational developments and speculate on several possible directions that Soviet strategy could take.

Because the conference will be held at a highly classified level, we will need to know as soon as possible whether you will be able to attend [redacted]
