

19 NOV 1973

Soc 4.01.2 Famous
Soviet SpiesNew from Books by U.S. News & World Report~~Soc 4.01.1~~ U.S. News
& World Report

FAMOUS SOVIET SPIES

The sensational exploits of Moscow's most notorious secret agents.

"Sensational exploits" is no exaggeration of the activities of the masters of duplicity you'll meet in the pages of FAMOUS SOVIET SPIES—a new hard-cover volume from Books by U.S. News & World Report. Their stories not only pack the excitement of spy thrillers, they also cast light on the massive campaigns of espionage and subversion the Soviet Union has conducted around the world.

Perhaps the most astonishing story is that of Richard Sorge, mastermind of a Soviet intelligence ring in Tokyo from 1933 until a few weeks before Pearl Harbor—and a man considered to be the greatest spy of the Twentieth Century. Operating as a Nazi journalist, Sorge gained access to the vital secrets of both the German and Japanese high commands. Long before the event, he supplied Moscow with the actual date of the German invasion of Russia. Later, his accurate information that Japan would not attack the Soviet Union enabled Stalin to shift 250,000 troops from Siberia to the western front—a move that may well have changed the course of history.

For sheer excitement, the story of George Blake is in a class by itself. A trusted agent for British Intelligence, Blake pretended, under orders, to be working for the Soviets as a double agent. In actual fact, however, he was a Soviet spy, engaged in betraying Western agents operating in Germany and behind the Iron Curtain. As a triple agent, his amazing feats of treachery have all the elements of the most imaginative spy fiction.

FAMOUS SOVIET SPIES offers many such fascinating stories. Special texts include an up-to-date "Who's Who" of Soviet spies who have operated in the United States and a thick dossier of terrorist activities by Soviet Intelligence.

To order a hard-cover copy of
FAMOUS SOVIET SPIES,
send $5.95 (+ 35¢ for postage
and handling) to the address below.

Books by U.S. News & World Report
Dept. 309
2300 N. Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037