CLANDESTINE CADUCEUS

by

Frank E. Gibson, Jr., M.D.

This suspenseful, authentic, and slightly mad tale of an undercover doctor working for the CIA was written by the former Deputy Director of Medical Services for the CIA. Dr. Gibson to write the exciting cloak and scalpel adventures of Dr. Caduceus Cadmus, a dynamic young Greek-American Air Force officer who is recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency as he completes his two-year military tour at the close of the Eisenhower era.

After being thoroughly investigated and examined, Dr. Cadmus is plunged into a weird training program. He learns the arts of espionage, sabotage, guerilla warfare, blackmail, seduction, torture, assassination — and fibbing. He is catapulted around the globe to some of the CIA's most hush-hush projects and visits an explosive insurgent school in Indochina, a wild, mountainous, agent-launching base near the Soviet and Chinese borders west of the Himalayas, an ominous racist nest in Black Africa, and has a shocking assignment in one of the most exclusive bedchambers in all of Europe.

Back home he is an undercover guest at Camp David and at the CIA's Central Park South Spy Spa. He also encounters bizarre types among the top secret martini-marinated Washington bureaucracy, with its lacquered and liquored Georgetown hostesses, freak Freudian psychiatrists who cater to the ills of the high and mighty, and fig-leaf-clutching Security sleuths.

All this glamour is soon to pall when Dr. Cadmus falls in love with a CIA Director's secretary, during the predatory pageantry of Kennedy's ascendancy to the White House. Against the background of the CIA's Bay of Pigs disaster, he is faced with the agonizing choice of continuing his career as a clandestine clinician, or retiring to a lucrative, if dull, private practice.
