MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: Invitation from the National Town Meeting

I suggest that you gracefully decline the attached invitation. While this is by far a much better forum than the Fund for Peace Conference, the need for your appearance is, in my opinion, much less compelling. I feel you said your piece on behalf of the Agency in an outstanding presentation at the Fund for Peace Conference. Reports I have received from both ends of the political spectrum and many stages in between were to the effect that you did an outstanding job under the most adverse circumstances. Nevertheless my advice is to quit or at least hold up while you are ahead and I think our Subcommittee Chairmen would feel that too much public exposure is not a good idea.

National Town Meeting

EISENHOWER THEATRE-KENNEDY CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS

September 30, 1974

Honorable William Colby
U.S. Central Intelligence Agency
McLean, Virginia

Dear Mr. Colby:

I am writing with what is obviously an unusual invitation, to be one of two principal participants in the National Town Meeting to be held in the Eisenhower Theatre of the Kennedy Center on Wednesday morning (10:30-11:30), November 6th, on "The Need for a Foreign Intelligence Organization by a Major Democratic Nation".

The session would be part of the weekly National Town Meeting series begun this summer in the Kennedy Center to give visitors to the nation's capital an opportunity to hear and ask questions of key governmental and other figures in our society. The series has been so well received that it has been expanded to include meetings alternately at the Kennedy Center and important historical sites in U.S. history, as: Concord, Mass. (Sept. 29), Independence Hall in Philadelphia (Oct. 13), Springfield, Illinois (Oct. 27) and others. Among the speakers are Senators Hugh Scott, J. William Fulbright, John Tower, Secretary of Agriculture Butz and Dr. Edward Teller. A list of the participants and topics this summer and as scheduled for this autumn thus far, is attached.

The programs are broadcast nationwide by public television and National Public Radio. The moderator for the sessions is Harrison Salisbury of the New York Times.

The format of the meetings calls for brief opening statements (five minutes or less) by the two participants, then about six minutes of questions by two established members of the media in order to get the session flowing, and then questions from members of the audience for the remainder of the hour. The objective of the format is to give cross-sections of citizens an opportunity to participate more in public discussion than has been possible with just speakers, or speakers-and-a-press panel, or senators and congressmen questioning expert witnesses. With the Town Meeting sessions conveyed nationally by public TV and public radio, it is hoped the want of increasing numbers of Americans to be heard can be responded to within a context of intelligent, rational discussion. The National Town Meetings and public broadcast of them have been made possible by a grant from the Mobil Oil Corporation similar to its funding of Masterpiece Theater on public TV.

I recognize that public meetings present problems for you and are contrary to the Agency's general past practice. At the same time, a widespread re-appraisal would seem to be developing as to the role of the intelligence community in a time of both increasing global complexity and evolving domestic attitudes. You have been responding with considerable sensitivity to the crosscurrents at work. And it would seem that one of the National Town Meetings, with its public television and radio coverage, would be an effective way to convey to a significant number of Americans your own thinking - and in a way relating directly to the public rather than just agency critics.

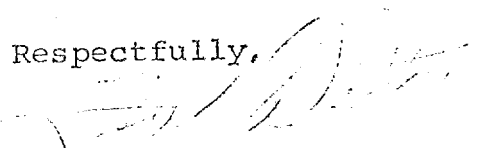

The National Town Meetings do not seek a direct debate but rather an exploring of contemporary developments from differing, mainstream viewpoints. The other principal participant for November 6th would be invited from the Senate, and the press panel would be balanced and selected from the major networks or newspapers. The suggested topic seeks to focus as much as possible on the broad underlying premises of national policy and need rather than on any particular specifics.

If you would like to have more information on the National Town Meeting or the proposed session, please do not hesitate to have your staff call me.

I hope very much that you will accept the invitation and believe it can be a constructive opportunity for you as well as for public thoughtfulness on an admittedly difficult matter.

Respectfully,

Frederick G. Dutton
Executive Director
