" WHO'S WHO IN CIA "

A biographical reference work on 3000 workers of the civilian and military intelligence branch of the United States in 120 countries

Published by Julius Mader

Berlin 1968

592 pages

The first biographical reference work on the American Central Intelligence Agency was recently published in the English and German languages in East Germany. Compiled by the Journalist Dr. JULIUS MADER it mentions about 3,000 American civilians and military men, who operate in more than 120 countries.

JOHN F. KENNEDY, the American President in 1962 already had called public attention to the growing importance of subversive war. Pointing out that the monstrous effectiveness of hydrogen bombs considerably reduces the possibility of their use, the President emphasized the increasing importance of subversive war and subversive actions for the infiltration of other countries.

In approximately the past fifteen years, the United States has carried out a series of extremely threatening military operations, which definitely could have led to a third world war, if the Socialist World had not insured peace through its vigilance. An examination of "Who's who in CIA<sup>u</sup> shows that the largest group of CIA workers <sup>was</sup> ~~is~~ concentrated in exactly those countries, which were conducting open or veiled aggressive activities or from whose area the United States planned aggression, for example Korea (1950), Guatemala(1954), the American intervention in Lebanon (1958), the unsuccessful invasion of Cuba (1961) or the military attacks against Cambodia. In addition, the aggressive war against the people of Vietnam and American intrigues in Greece in support of the reactionary military junta in its takeover of power in 1967. The Centrist Democratic Youth Association EDIN already revealed the fact before the April putsch, that CIA had influenced the Greek elections with considerable sums of money.

An investigation of the facts before the six day war of Israel in June 1967 shows, among other things, that the United States Defense Department is today the greatest purchaser of petroleum and the cheapest crude oil comes from the Near East. Wall Street Journal reported that the United States has invested the enormous amount of eight billion pound sterling in oil production in the Near East, while the American political economist VICTOR FERLO declares that a third of all the profits from foreign investments, which flowed into the United States in 1965, came from the Near East, an area in which the CIA, as MADDER's book shows, has employed a very large number of its workers.

The extraordinarily powerful and influential intelligence agency, the CIA, is directly subordinate to the Office of the President of the United States of America. The CIA presents to the President every morning a "list" of items investigated by the Intelligence Agency, which is characterized as "strictly secret". This list is compiled in the CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia and is said to cost about fifty million dollars. The radio antennas installed on the roof alone cost 50,000 dollars. Three million words are processed daily in Langley and are based on radio reports in 60 languages. Every month about 200,000 newspapers, books and other publications are analyzed in all details. Even the West German news magazine Der Spiegel pointed out in its edition of 23 May, 1966 that only 17.8 percent of applicants for CIA employment were found suitable after taking the compulsory lie detector tests. The majority of CIA workers have been in CIA employment at least 10 years, as the figures in "Who's who in CIA show". The salaries are high and, in many cases, exceed $20,000 a year. It has always appeared that CIA workers were entrusted with civilian assignments. However, their actions prove the opposite.

The Military Assignment of the CIA

"Who's who in CIA thoroughly destroys the official legend that CIA is a non-military organization. It is estimated that more than a million American soldiers were stationed abroad in 1967. CIA workers are attached to these troops. It also must be pointed out that the United States now acts as a partner in bilateral or multilateral military agreements with over 40 countries. The second general staff of USA military intelligence employes professionally more than 5,000 persons, of whom, as the Washington magazine Army reports<sup>ed</sup> in May 1967, more than a fifth were attached at that time to the American forces in South Vietnam. In addition the Pentagon has military attaches at 71 United States embassies and legations. Finally the American Government tends to send "advisers" whenever an opportunity presents itself.

Finally there is the twin brother of the CIA, the so called Defense Intelligence Agency, which was founded by the former head of the Defense Department Robert S. McNamara and since his resignation this year, has been built up with great speed by CLARK M. CLIFFORD. CLIFFORD played a leading role in the founding of the CIA in 1946 and has also acted as an adviser of the intelligence organization since 1961 for the President of the United States, who appointed him the head of the Defense Department this year.

CIA Remains Anonymous

It is understandable that ruling circles in the United States are not exactly anxious to publicize the activity of the CIA. However, recently the subversive activity of the CIA has become public and, in fact, at a period when it pleased the men behind the scenes the very least. Among the examples, as one first thinks about it, are the unsuccessful Bay of Pigs invasion against Cuba in 1961 and the fact that the CIA failed when on 13 August, 1962, East Germany secured its state frontiers against West Berlin, which shelters some 90 espionage organizations, mostly financed and supported by the United States and serves the West German extremists as a "springboard to the East".

In "Who's who in CIA" MADER comes to the conclusion that it is high time to begin, at least the first exposure offensive against the machinations of the CIA. The East German journalist hints that, in all probability, further volumes in the CIA will follow.

Also interesting are the statements about the development of the CIA and the special functions of related organizations, such as the FBI, the Office of Intelligence Research (OIR) and organizations associated with the CIA, such as church, cultural and academic organizations, radio stations like Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, which concentrate on propaganda broadcasts to the Socialist countries. We also find exact details on the control, which the CIA exerts on a number of mass media such as Preuves (Paris) and Encounter (London), aside from the indirect cooperation with organizations with such innocent sounding names as American Council for the International Commission of Jurists, Congress for Cultural Freedom, International Labor Research Inc.

The Los Angeles Times (May 1967) interviewed the former CIA consultant THOMAS BRADEN, who pointed out that the CIA is systematically carrying out a systematically developed program for splitting the West German trade unions. Large financial amounts were used to keep the trade unions on an anticommunist course.

In another exposure, Reuters reported on 18 October, 1967 that a report by students from six countries was being published on the same day, according to which the International Student Conference (ISR) active in Holland received at least 70 percent of its financial support from the CIA.

In India at the end of 1967, more than 200 scientists published a statement, in which they expressed their alarm about the fact that foreign agents and similar organizations, in the first place the CIA, had infiltrated in vital areas of public life in India. The scholars attacked with special sharpness the activities of the so-called Asia Foundation, which according to statements of the Indian Government is financed by CIA.

The CIA is forbidden any intelligence activity in the United States, even according to its own rules. The American magazine Saturday Evening Post published at the end of 1967 a devastating exposure of the evil machinations of the CIA in the United States, which " actually has infiltrated all important and influential areas of American life, such as employer associations, trade unions, churches, the Government, universities, the press, other mass media and much else". However, as the Saturday Evening Post remarks " neither the Government or the Congress stand in the way to prevent such a development." This magazine also emphasized that Vice President HUMPHREY recently said at a press conference that the CIA is only carrying out the policy of the organizations it is subordinate to.

This is also true for RICHARD N. HELMS, the Director of the CIA, who at the same time is Chairman of the United States Intelligence Board (USIB) and who, in turn, controls all the military and civilian departments of the American espionage network. For the whole apparatus is led by no one else but the President of the United States himself.
