Dear Mr. Jovich:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding my recollection of the day President Kennedy was killed.

I had just landed at Kennedy Airport in New York, flying in from Indianapolis, and as I walked through the terminal I learned that President Kennedy had been shot in Dallas.

My reaction was one of great shock. Some minutes later, I learned that the President had died. I don't recall considering immediately the impact on the nation. I do recall that that evening my wife and I got together with half a dozen friends for dinner and had a very somber discussion wondering how this tragedy could have occurred, appreciating the fact that our Constitution gave us a sure mechanism for the swift transfer of authority in so tragic a circumstance, and assuring each other that our nation would carry on and meet its responsibilities.

I hope these recollections will assist in your interesting project.

Sincerely,

William J. Casey

The Honorable William J. Casey
Director

Dear Mr. Casey:

As you know, 1988 will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Without doubt, November 22, 1963, will forever remain one of the most sad and unforgettable dates in American history.

In the interest of contributing to both the memory of President Kennedy and the event itself, I have chosen the names of a select group of outstanding Americans in order to compile my upcoming book, November 22, 1963: How They Reacted. All of these prominent individuals, including yourself, are receiving letters from me seeking responses on how they reacted upon hearing the news of JFK's death. Some of these names were already famous twenty years ago, many were not. Nevertheless, this book should prove to be invaluable reading for all who appreciate history, both young and old.

Accordingly, it is my hope that you will personally respond to the following questions:

1. Where were you when you first heard the news of President Kennedy's shooting?
2. How did you react to the news?
3. On that date, what impact did you feel President Kennedy's death would have on the nation?

Thank you for your assistance in responding to this letter at your earliest convenience, as well as contributing to both my research and to history.

Sincerely,

John B. Jovich

THE VICE PRESIDENT

Mr. John B. Jovlich
Historian

Dear Mr. Jovlich:

Thank you for your recent letter and request for my recollection of the day that President Kennedy was killed. The answers to your specific questions are:

(1) I was in East Texas speaking at a Kiwanis Club luncheon when I heard of the Kennedy assassination. I was making a political speech as part of my campaign for the U.S. Senate.

(2) My reaction to the news was one of shock and disbelief.

(3) I don't recall that I considered immediately the impact on the nation. President Johnson moved so fast--properly so--to take over that there was never any question of continuity.

Best of luck on your project. It certainly sounds like it would be an interesting book.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Jovich:

I am in receipt of your letter dated May 20, 1983, and the following are my responses.

We (Betty and I) were terribly shocked because we had become reasonably good friends of President Kennedy during our first term in the House of Representatives. JFK came to the House of Representatives in January 1947 and I was sworn in two years later in January 1949. In 1949 and 1950 our staff offices were across the corridor from each other. As a result, JFK and I got well acquainted.

I was especially saddened because a person I admired had met a tragic death and I was angry because this crime could occur in the United States.

On the date of the assassination there was no way I could accurately assess the impact of his assassination. I knew, of course, Vice President Johnson was an able dedicated and effective leader, but had no specific knowledge as to what his policies might be. Subjectively, I did thank our forefathers for providing a Constitution that gave our nation the capability to handle the transfer of authority in such a tragic circumstance.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Gerald R. Ford". The signature is written in a cursive style with a large, prominent "G" and "F".

P.S. My wife, Betty, and I were driving in Washington, D.C., for an interview with an educational counselor for one of our children when we heard about the shooting of President Kennedy.

Mr. John B. Jovich

Dear Mr. Jovich:

I was in my office at NBC in Washington preparing for that night's news program, the Huntley-Brinkley Report, when a young staff member ran in and said, "Kennedy's been shot."

My first reaction was to see exactly what had happened -- was he seriously hurt? Was he alive? And my second was to rush into the NBC studio and put the news on the air. Huntley and I then stayed on almost continuously for three days, around the clock.

I thought the impact on the American people, since it happened in a time of social disturbance and disorder, would be profound. And I believe it was.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Jovich,

This is in response to your letter of December 5.

When I first heard the news of President Kennedy's assassination, I was in a small pharmacy in Phoenix, Arizona, purchasing a prescription for one of my children who was ill.
I was stunned by the news.

When I returned to my car, I wept because of the sense of dismay that in the twentieth century our nation's President was vulnerable to such an attack. The damage was not only to a youthful President and his family, but to all Americans who cherish their free and open society.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Jovich:

Thank you for your letter of March 3. The following are my answers to your questions.

1. I was in my law office in San Francisco when I heard the first report of the Kennedy assassination. My first reaction was that I could not believe he had actually been killed, because the first radio reports offered some hope.
2. My general reaction was one of shock and anger, and a feeling that the assassination attempt (as I then thought it was) was another example of our growing propensity to apply violence to deal with every issue.
3. I do not think I considered immediately the impact on the nation. However, that came later, particularly when I talked with my young son that night, who had been very deeply affected by watching the whole terrible tragedy unfold on television. His reaction seemed to me to mirror that of the state of shock into which everyone of all ages had been plunged. I had known President Kennedy in college, and this was a source of additional shock and personal horror.

Thank you again for writing. I hope the above answers will be helpful to you.

Sincerely,
