10. The Secretary asked for our analysis of the Soviet acknowledgment that there could be victory in nuclear war. I described differences of view in the Agency, including the fact that there were those who believed Soviet statements since 1977 had been disinformation about their real intentions based on their view of what would sell in the West, but that their actions suggested that they were planning their forces and defenses with a view that if there were a nuclear war, their intention was in fact to be victorious (or to prevail). He asked for our analysis of this. (DDI action with NIO/USSR)
