

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY DIRECTOR

17 April 1987

Melba,

I understand that Mr. Taft will be hosting the next Number Two's Dinner. Enclosed is a list which may be of help. Of course, some of the "blanks" may be filled in by the time Mr. Taft has his dinner.

NOTE: Regarding AID, NSC, and USIA, they are not usually included in the dinners. Mr. Whitehead works closely with them at State and invited them to his dinner on 4 March, and Mr. Gates invited NSC last evening for the same reason. I checked with Mr. Wright's office to see if they should be included on a regular basis, and was told no, the group should be kept to the deputy agency heads, with the option, of course, to include others like the above if circumstances warrant.

Hope this helps!

I am attaching a copy of a memo I sent to [redacted] in EDR on 2 April. I believe [redacted] told me round tables would be possible as long as we don't have more than 16 people for dinner. If there is a problem using round tables, please let me know and we will discuss the other options.

I am also attaching a copy of a diagram of planned use of the conference room during cocktails for a short presentation at 7:00 p.m. by [redacted] from the Agency's Historical Intelligence Collection office. Note the table that can be used for hors d'oeuvres at lower right. [redacted] has requested that a person from DCI security staff be present in the conference room from 4:00 p.m. on through the festivities. I have arranged for that with Mike H. from our security staff.

FROM: [redacted] O/DDCI

SUBJECT: 16 April 1987 Dinner Hosted by Mr. Gates
(Cocktails at 6:30 in the DCI Conference Room)
(Dinner at 7:30 in the Executive Dining Room)

As we discussed briefly this morning, Mr. Gates would like dinner menu No. 1 (veal) for the 16 April dinner (dinner menu No. 3 (red snapper) for his 14 April dinner). He would like to use round tables, if at all possible. At the present time, we are expecting 18 to 20 people for cocktails, and 17-19 for dinner.

Mr. Gates would like to have some small, light hors d'oeuvres with cocktails in the DCI Conference Room. The "bar" will be on a rolling cart; hors d'oeuvres will be placed on a table or credenza in the Conference Room.

Mr. Gates would like to have after-dinner drinks offered - your choice.

He has no special preference in liquors (although I do know he likes Jack Daniels), so I'll also leave that up to you. Should also have Perrier on hand, and some good sherry.

Choice of bread, rolls, muffins, etc. is also up to you. The burgundy tablecloths and fresh flowers sound lovely.

STAT

FYI: [redacted] from the Agency's Historical Intelligence Collection office will be doing a 15-minute program in the Conference Room at 7:00 p.m.

[redacted] I hope this helps you. I can't think of anything else at present. If you have any questions at all, give me a call. I will give guest list to Protocol as soon as I have heard from everyone.

DRAFT
8 April 1987

Comments by Curator, HIC at DDCI Reception, 16 April 1987

The craft of intelligence has been in existence a long time. Philip Knightly^e's new book on the subject is entitled The Second Oldest Profession. There are artifacts indicating as much, such as the tablet of about 1370 B.C. on which a prince of the Hittites instructs his emissary: "Bring me back reliable information."

Since CIA as an institution has not yet reached its 40th birthday, its artifacts are of much more recent vintage. Moreover the oldest we have are not, strictly speaking, intelligence artifacts, though of historical interest because they illustrate the origins of the present Agency Headquarters and the biography of our founding father, William J. "Wild Bill" Donovan.

Originally the land hereabouts belonged to the Lee family: hence, Langley, short for "land of the Lees". Early in the Civil War what is now Agency property was occupied by Vermont infantry regiments, shown in the photographs, with Pennsylvania units headquartered a few hundred yards up the road on Georgetown Pike.

Among the personal effects of Wild Bill in our possession, courtesy of the Donovan family, are his uniform belt from his days with the New York Cavalry before World War I; 45-caliber bullets issued to him during that war when he served with the "Fighting 69th" Regiment; a monogrammed shaving kit; and a straight razor. A doughboy from the 69th remembered that at one point during the battle of the Meuse-Argonne: (Play tape of doughboy saying this:)

"I found Colonel Donovan on the first ridge... He was sitting in a shell hole, cool as a cucumber, while his barber tried to shave him... I don't know how he got through that shave without getting his throat cut... The barber was shaking like a leaf because shells were falling all around." Donovan did get through the shave and won a medal of honor at the Meuse-Argonne.

In World War II Donovan, now a General, was Director of the Office of Strategic Services. His telephone extension in the OSS headquarters telephone directory was 600 - an inevitable reminder of the casualties of World War I. As battalion commander, he saw 600 of his 1000 men made casualties in 4 days. Of the 3500 men in the regiment who sailed to France from New York, just 600 were able to stand muster at the Armistice. Much of his interest in unorthodox warfare, and the weapons developed for it, represented his search for some alternative to the carnage of trench warfare he personally had experienced.

Stanley Lovell, the Chief of OSS Research and Development, ^{produced} ~~developed~~ most of the weapons and devices of unorthodox warfare illustrated in the OSS brochure. Donovan called him ^{Professor} ~~Dr.~~ Moriarity, after the evil genius of the Sherlock Holmes stories. One of ^{Professor} ~~Dr.~~ Moriarity's creations was the silent, flashless, smokeless, 22-caliber pistol. Another invention illustrated in the brochure was named after the famous actress Hedy Lamarr - for reasons that need not detain us. "Heddy" had rather the opposite characteristics from the pistol - full of noise, smoke, and flash, but causing no damage. An agent could use this to escape a tight spot. In more recent times counterterrorist teams have used it to gain entry to a hijacked plane on the ground. One of Donovan's biographers, Richard Dunlap, claims that Donovan used a briefing of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the opportunity to demonstrate Heddy - much to the astonishment of the high-ranking luminaries present.

After World War II, we learned quickly that the Soviet Union was employing a variety of sophisticated spy devices against its former allies. At first the tradecraft was fairly primitive. Thus the camera taken from a Soviet agent in Korea in 1948 was quite effective for its time, but did not do much to protect the agent. Quite clearly the Cyrillic letters on the camera identify not only the factory in the Ukraine it came from but the NKVD agent - the predecessor of the KGB - who owned it. Other gadgets, such as the listening devices placed in the seal of the Embassy in Moscow in the 1950's and in the heel of a US Ambassador's shoe, showed a greater degree of sophistication.

Other countries' services also developed items for use in trying circumstances. This elegant cane from India is capable of firing a single 45-caliber shell with the aid of a trigger concealed in the metal collar.

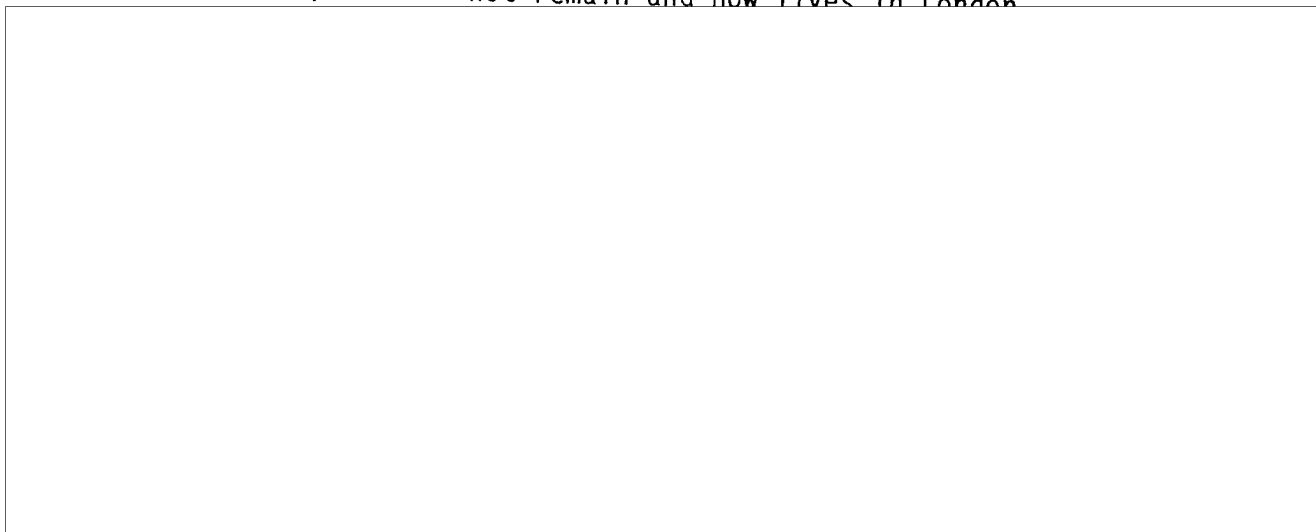

Allen Dulles was our longest tenured DCI. Artifacts associated with his leadership include the model of the U-2 developed by CIA in cooperation with the Air Force, and a pod launcher from a U-2 stationed in Taiwan. Others include medals presented to Dulles as DCI and his own CIA identification card - next to his OSS ID card. Finally we have insignia prepared for but never issued to the Bay of Pigs brigade.

My selection of post-Dulles artifacts is relatively limited due to present classification restrictions, as can be inferred to some degree by what is shown. Che Guevara's flashlight was obtained when he was captured in Bolivia in 1967. It is of course an Eveready. We also have the original of his diary in Spanish, but that has not yet been declassified even though a version of it has been translated and published.

Similarly, there is documentation connected with the defection of Stalin's daughter that same year which I have been advised not to show publicly. I hope the portion of her letter requesting asylum - in which she identifies herself as Stalin's daughter and relates how only recently she had learned that her mother committed suicide - will interest you. Her farewell letter to her children - both the Russian and the translation are in her handwriting - suggesting that one day she would want to return to the Soviet Union to see them. So she did, but did not remain and now lives in London.

STAT

Finally, I call to your attention the bronze plaque presented to Mr. Casey at his last public appearance as DCI, in Philadelphia this past December. The plaque honors a graduate of that university, but also other Agency employees, under cover, who died with him in the bombing of the US Embassy in Beirut in April 1983. In the final two paragraphs of his speech, Mr. Casey takes note of the multiple honorees.

(Then follows a three-minute video tape of the last portion of Mr. Casey's speech, and La Salle alumnus Frank Blatcher's compliment to Mr. Casey.)

As Frank Blatcher's words suggest, it is not only the bronze plaque, but the videotape of Mr. Casey's speech that we will preserve with honor in the Historical Intelligence Collection.

Thank you for this opportunity to share with you some of our history.

Dear Bob:

You are going to be hosting the next "Number 2's Dinner" -- and I have a suggestion. Why not invite Ken Duberstein, the new Deputy Chief of Staff to this dinner? He might enjoy it -- and it would be a very good intro for all of those attending to hear what Ken has to say about the new White House team.

We now have the "Number 2's Dinners" scheduled through the summer. Will Taft of Defense has volunteered for the last part of June, and Arnie Burns of Justice will take the end of July or the first part of August. You will be hearing from them directly.

Best regards,

NOTES ON MENU FOR #2 Dinner 16 April

Choice of brand names for good liquor - they are running short on bourbon, gin, and scotch. Any favorite brands, besides the Jack Daniels?

small light hors d'oeuvres with cocktails in DCI conference room head table will seat 8 in a U shape so head table folk can easily see everyone else.

If BG goes for the veal, may choose asparagus for the vegetable. The steak is nice, but it's hard because everyone likes their steak done a different way. Suggest the veal menu, and Bob can choose one of the other menus for his 14 April dinner. Can mix and match, of course.

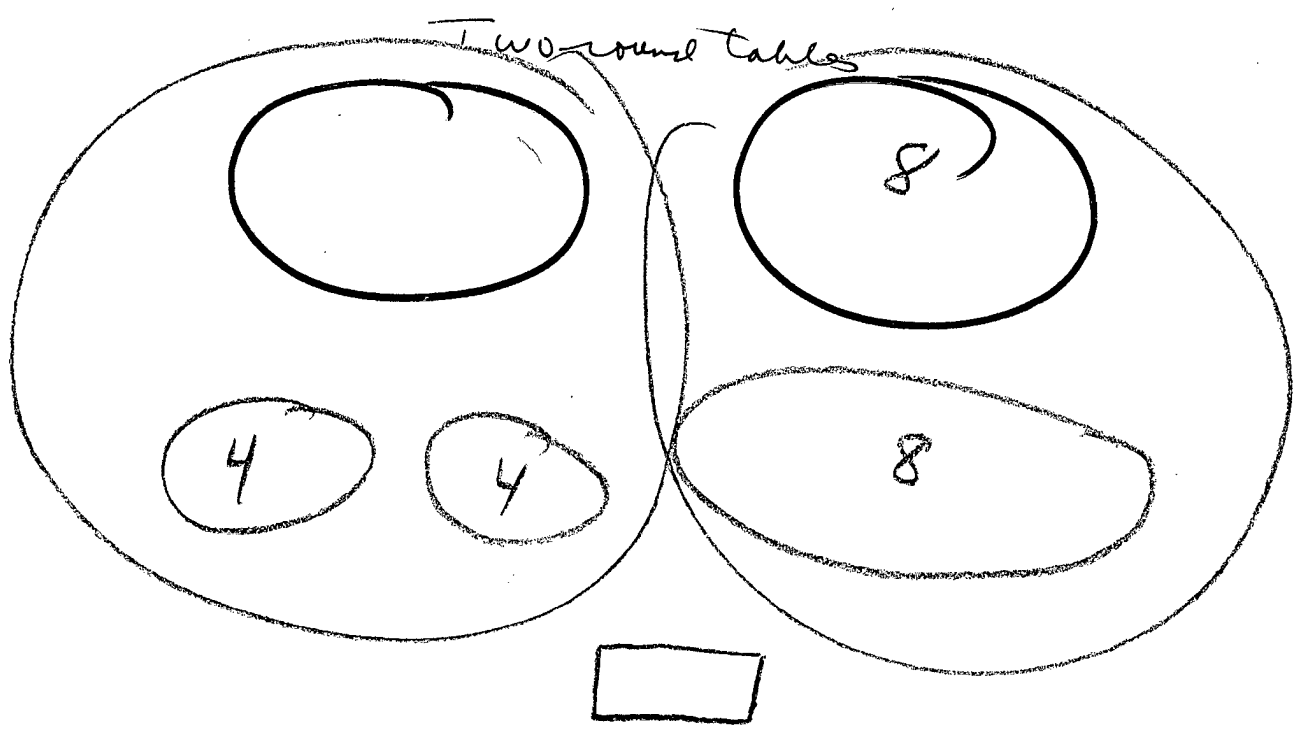

Bread and rolls, have a choice of two things - rolls, muffins, perhaps the brioche they have recently been making that is quite good.

Should have on hand some perrier water, and some good sherry. Any preference?

Do you want to offer after dinner ~~cigars~~ and/or drinks? If so, what kind of cigars? They have bought a case of BG's favorite wine.

Talk to - see how he wants his space set up; remember to leave a little space on a credenza or table for hors d'oeuvres, napkins, etc.

18 March 1987

Bob Gates is hosting the next "Number 2's Dinner", with spouses. Suggested dates - April 16 or April 23 (both Thursdays). Call Heidi to see if dates are available. Call guests to see on which date most can attend. Send invitations with map and directions as to where they will park, be met, etc.

Call [] in EDR to talk about possible menus. We want to go "all out" on this one. Will be for wives, also. Maximum number - 26.

STAT

Talk to [] re setting up a display of spy gear, etc., perhaps some old stuff out of the Historical Collection, including some of the Donovan stuff, in the DCI conference room, where cocktails will be served. Bill should plan to do perhaps a 15-minute presentation on the stuff.

Wine with dinner - Chateau San Michel.

Cocktails at 6:30 - presentation by [] at 7:00 - dinner at 7:30

24 March

Dinner will be April 16.

Talked to [] - he and [] want to come up and take a look at DCI conference room - have set up with Delia for 1400-1500 Tuesday, 31 March.

Have booked DCI Conference Room with Delia for 16 April frm 1600 on through the evening to allow time for [] to set up program. He will give me a status report on what he plans to do ASAP. He plans to use the clip of the last two paragraphs of Mr. Casey's speech to La Salle U. re Ames Memorial on video. Will ask [] to help set up. Bill is also going to have on hand a few of the "spy" tradecraft items we can use for something like this. He has people working on it. Bill would like a DCI Security person there, also.
