

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 48

U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT
17 November 1980

Who'll Be Who in the Reagan Administration

Appointees to the new cabinet and White House staff will be doubly important in a regime in which the President is expected to delegate enormous power.

Ronald Reagan's roster of cabinet secretaries and senior White House staff will be a blend of longtime California advisers and veterans of the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Although the President-elect is only beginning to consider candidates for executive posts, he has made clear that anyone he chooses must abide by his philosophy of less government and a stronger military posture.

* * * *

William J. Casey. Manager of the Reagan presidential campaign, Casey, 67, is being mentioned as a potential director of the Central Intelligence Agency. He has extensive experience in Washington, having served as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and as head of the Export-Import Bank.

EXCERPTED