Diet specialist Dick Gregory and civil rights activist Hosea L. Williams were arrested outside CIA headquarters in McLean late yesterday morning and charged with trespassing, Fairfax County police said.

The incident came one day after 561 demonstrators were arrested for blocking entrances to the agency in protest of American policies in Central America and South Africa.

Mr. Gregory, 54, and Mr. Williams, 61, positioned themselves on a traffic island in the road leading to the CIA's main gate about 11 a.m., said county police spokeswoman Judy Dailey.

Agency security officers asked them to leave, and when they refused, county police arrested them. They declined to accept summonses and were transported without incident to the county's Adult Detention Center, Officer Dailey said.

A county magistrate released them on $500 bond each. Mr. Williams is scheduled for trial June 9, and Mr. Gregory's trial is set for July 2.

Meanwhile, 91 demonstrators who were arrested at CIA headquarters Monday and charged with obstruction of free passage were arraigned yesterday in Fairfax County General District Court. All but nine were released on personal recognizance or bonds ranging from $500 to $1,000, with non-jury trial dates scattered from May to July.

Among them was David Dellinger, one of the original Chicago 7. Mr. Dellinger was released yesterday on personal recognizance and is scheduled for a trial June 25, said Fairfax County Commonwealth's Attorney Robert F. Horan.

Of the nine still in jail, seven — four men and three women — were denied bond because they refused to give authorities their names. Two other women gave their names but were not released after they refused to sign court documents. None of them is a celebrity, said county Sheriff M. Wayne Huggins.

The demonstrators who refused to cooperate were ordered held behind bars until their trial date, Mr. Horan said.

In all, 80 protesters were held overnight for refusing to give their names or failing to post bond, Mr. Huggins said. Former Catholic priest and anti-war activist Philip Berrigan, also arrested, posted bond Monday, Mr. Huggins said.

Maximum penalty for obstruction of free passage, a misdemeanor, is a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, Mr. Horan said.
