NOTE FOR: Executive Assistant to the DDA

25X1 FROM: [Redacted] Director of Logistics

SUBJECT: Reducing Bureaucracy

Jim:

1. This in response to D/OIR's memo, dated 8 May, Subject: Thoughts on Reducing Bureaucracy.

25X1 25X1 2. D/OIR suggests that handling property lease arrangements through the General Services Administration (GSA) is a "most troublesome bureaucratic stumbling block." His complaint is valid but does not tell the entire story with respect to the relocation of the Map Library [Redacted]

3. There is precious little that we can do to reduce bureaucracy in GSA--somewhat presumptuous, in my opinion, to even suggest such an unrealistic option. Furthermore, I do not believe that was the DDA's intent when he asked for suggestions to reduce bureaucracy.

4. We are putting tremendous pressure on GSA to solve the Map Library situation and, in fact, have in hand three potential relocation sites. We have, of course, kept OIR informed of these developments.

NOTE FOR: Executive Officer
Office of Logistics

SUBJECT: Reducing Bureaucracy

Bill,

As you know, Bill Donnelly sent a memo to all Agency Office/Division Directors and asked them to identify bureaucratic stumbling blocks with which he can help. The attached memo from the Director of Information Resources describes an incident with GSA and space acquisition.

Could you ask someone to look into this and give me a call with any additional background information or suggestions. Bill would like to resolve as many problems as possible which are identified in these "reducing bureaucracy" responses.

Thanks for your help.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Administration

25X1 FROM:

[Redacted]

Director of Information Resources

SUBJECT:

Thoughts on Reducing Bureaucracy

1. The most troublesome bureaucratic stumbling block that the Office of Information Resources has had to face since it was established in June 1986 has been the General Services Administration and its ineffectiveness in handling a property leasing arrangement for OIR's Map Services Center (MSC). Although this is not the first time you have been alerted to this problem, its seriousness makes it worth repeating.

4. Also troublesome, although on a different scale, is the Agency's position management and classification process--a cumbersome process which provides managers little control over their personnel resources. This issue is not a new one; however, with the inauguration of a new compensation system which would be based on a variety of skill levels and job categories, there is the opportunity for much needed change and more flexibility in a new system.
