DESCRIPTORS: *Smallpox, *Vaccines, *Leukemia,
*Antigen-antibody reactions.

The available literature and original observations provide evidence that the administration of smallpox vaccine to patients with leukemia often gives severe general reactions, which are frequently accompanied by major local reactions in the form of necrosis of the soft tissues, etc., and evokes an exacerbation of the leukemic process (some in cases with a fatal result). All of these untoward effects result from the fact that leukemia (irre- (Biological Sciences-Pathology, TT, v. 11, no. 6) (over)
