MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

VIA: Deputy Director/Designate of Central Intelligence 25X1

FROM: Lieutenant General Edward J. Heinz, USAF
Director, Intelligence Community Staff

SUBJECT: Department of Energy (DOE) Intelligence Study [] 25X1

1. Last year the Department of Energy commissioned an independent study of the Department's intelligence efforts. The study was led by retired Rear Admiral Sumner Shapiro, former Director of Naval Intelligence. Admiral Shapiro was charged with the task of conducting a comprehensive survey of DOE's intelligence efforts and the Department's support obligations to the Intelligence Community. [] 25X1

2. Members of my staff were informed of this effort as it proceeded. The study resulted in several sweeping recommendations, including the establishment of a Senior Intelligence Officer, Mr. Robert Walsh. Also of significant note was a recommendation by the study team that DOE increase the resources, funds and full-time employees devoted to intelligence. I totally support these recommendations. []

3. We received a letter describing the study effort and seeking your support for DOE's commitment to assume a more active role in national intelligence. The letter was from Deputy Secretary Joseph S. Salgado, who has since left the Department. The Senior Intelligence Officer recommends addressing our answer to Secretary-Designate Watkins, but delaying the response until he is confirmed--approximately two weeks. [] 25X1

The Honorable James D. Watkins
Secretary of Energy
Washington, D.C. 20585

Dear Admiral Watkins:

Please accept my hearty congratulations on your confirmation as Secretary of Energy.

Former Deputy Secretary Joseph S. Salgado sent me a letter describing the Department's efforts to review and ultimately improve its interface to the Intelligence Community. I applaud and highly encourage these efforts.

The Department of Energy (DOE) has often played a critical role in the intelligence process. DOE's actions seeking an even greater and more significant role in the Intelligence Community are welcome and highly supported.

I understand the recommendations of this study are broad and far-reaching. My staff and the Community stand ready to assist you as you embark on the sizeable job of implementing the principal conclusions and recommendations. In particular, I totally support recommendations for increased intelligence resources in the DOE program, and the designation of Mr. Walsh as the Department's Senior Intelligence Officer.

Thank you for informing me of this valuable work. I look forward to working with you and your team during the coming years.

Sincerely yours,

William H. Webster
