

U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT
8 December 1975

Washington Whispers[®]

Will Bush Forsake CIA Job? . . .

George Bush, the CIA Director-designate now serving as U.S. envoy in Peking, is being urged by friends to talk to the President during his China visit about another top-level job. They fear a divisive fight in the Senate over Mr. Bush's confirmation to the CIA post because of his political background and ambitions.

★ ★ ★