

Newsweek _____
Time _____
U.S. News & World Report _____

Washington p 7
Date JULY 1991

INSIDE THE WHITE HOUSE BOB WOODWARD TAKES AIM AT QUAYLE

prized possessions: a specially printed box of Wheaties featuring the President catching a fish. The brass plaque on the Lucite-encased memento reads: TO PRESIDENT BUSH, THE CHAMPION OF PRESIDENTS, FROM THE COMPANY OF CHAMPIONS.

▪ Vice President Dan Quayle and his staff are a little edgy, having just heard that Washington Post investigative reporter Bob Woodward and senior political writer David Broder are teaming up for an in-depth article on the Vice President. Some White House officials fear that Woodward is trying to turn up some dirt on Quayle.

▪ The latest joke is what George Bush said after being informed that Millie may be a source of his Graves' disease: "The bitch set me up."

▪ One of George Bush's new

▪ The telephone in Bush's private study in the White House living quarters has buttons giving him direct lines to the following people, as indicated on tabs next to each button: VP, Marlin, Baker, Sununu, [White House deputy Andrew] Card, Webster, Brady, Brent, [Bush secretary] Patty Presock, Cheney, and Powell.

▪ The Bush 1992 campaign team is shaping up. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher will soon resign to become chairman of the campaign. Pollster Bob Teeter will serve as grand strategist. Watch for some fireworks over this appointment—Teeter is a rival of White House chief of staff John Sununu, who is expected to direct efforts from the White House. Teeter rejected a White House job in 1989 because he didn't like Sununu. Look for a major campaign post for political consultants Charlie Black or Rich Bond.