5. CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT IN NEPAL

closely with New Delhi.

Comment on:
	The King of Nepal on 14 July accepted the resignation of Tanka Prasad Acharya's government and asked Dr. K. I. Singh to try to form a coalition government within two weeks. Singh is the political leader who spent three abortive coup in	years in exile in Communist China following an 1952, but he is now believed to be co-operating

Considerable speculation has surrounded Singh's activities since he returned to Nepal in 1955 as it was widely suspected that he might be operating as an agent of Peiping. However, while building his new political organization, the United Democratic Party, Singh has repeatedly expressed his support for a constitutional monarchy and for cooperation with India. He has opposed closer relations with Communist China.

While these sentiments could conceal pro-Communist leanings, increasing evidence since last fall suggests that Singh has reached an understanding with New Delhi. The Indian government has shown growing concern over the outgoing prime minister's pro-Chinese policies, and may have decided to throw its influence in Nepal behind Singh as the best hope for establishing a stable government under which India's "special interest" in the Himalayan state would be protected.

6. TRUCE COMMISSION CHAIRMAN URGES UNIFICATION ELECTIONS IN VIETNAM

Comment on:
	T. N. Kaul, Indian chairman of the Vietnam truce commission, has presented forcefully to Western repre-
holding early electi	sentatives in Saigon the merits of one for the unification of North and South holding early elections for the unification of North and South Vietnam. Kaul contends current disaffection in Communist North Vietnam would result in a pro-Diem majority in carefully supervised elections, but warns that the Viet Minh's reconsolidation program will have North Vietnam under control by the end of 1958, if not before.

While India's long-range views have always supported the holding of unification elections as called for by the 1954 Geneva agreement, Kaul's proposal is a sharp change from New Delhi's tactical acceptance in the past of the status quo. The American embassy in Saigon suspects Kaul was acting under instructions and that his proposal may be designed to promote India as the "great paternalistic unifying force in Vietnam" with the ultimate aim of bringing the entire country into the neutralist bloc. This approach, moreover, is in line with Nehru's belief that the time is propitious for friendly approaches in the interest of settling outstanding East-West differences.

Saigon can be expected to reject Kaul's proposal. President Diem is scheduled to visit New Delhi in November where he may be pressed by Nehru to adopt a more "moderate" attitude toward North Vietnam. Hanoi, on the other hand, has recently reinvigorated its campaign for reunification and would welcome active Indian support. In practice, however, Hanoi would not agree to free elections.
