Status of Zarate Willka Investigation

The investigation of the Zarate Willka Liberation Armed Forces, the far-left terrorist group responsible for the killings of two US Mormon missionaries in La Paz on 24 May, has come to a virtual standstill

The investigation probably will not move forward in the near term because of changes related to the government reshuffle under newly elected President Paz Zamora. The new Minister of Interior, Guillermo Capobianco, is expected to replace or reassign most senior police officials by the end of the year

In addition, several of the current investigators have received threats from Zarate Willka, and they probably would welcome leaving the case.
