I. THE RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN

GUDERIAN: Everything went well at the start. After the fall of SMcLETSK our high command was faced with the same choice of decisions as NAPOLEON in 1812: Should I first go to MCSCOM, or should I first con-Kunder my control. This problem had been considered earlier, because everyone know that such a decision would have to be made scmetime. Even before this campaign the FUEHRER had decided to take LENINGRAD first, in order to have the entire Baltie Sea under his control, and thus establish a raval base supporting the German left flank. At the time when our troops stood at the gates of LENINGRAD, and when the drive was held up at KIEV, on our right flank, he suddenly changed his mind. He abandoned the idea to take LENINGRAD first -- an attempt which could have succeeded. Now did he attempt to take MGSCOW as NAPOLEON had dong--in spate of our firm conviction that MGSCO, could be taken. In fact, I had already given orders for an attack on MOSCO for 15 Aug with my PANGER Army. Instead he decided, after weeks of thought, to conquer the UKR, INE first. Thus, on 25 Aug, I had to head back in a southwesterly direction toward KIEV, instead of being allowed to start my drive toward MCSCO: Well, at least the capture of KIEV resulted in the isolation and surrender of an army group. But it set us back 4 weeks in our advance toward MOSCOW. It got up into the muddy season, where the mud made traffic on ordinary roads impossible, and retarded it very much even on hardsurfaced roads. It was winter before it got too cold. You mustn't underestimate MOSCOw's importance. MOSCO. is not only the capital of Russi... but considering the conditions of 1941, it was the hub of Russia's communication system. All the connections between North and South which were still usable, all double-track railroad line, all the main telegraph and telephone lines, all camels and mavigable BOSCON also controlled the political affairs, a powerful armament industry, and a traffic and communications center of that nation, and could split Russia into two parto. I personally presented this case to the FUERER on the night of 23 Aug 1941. Then he was still undecided. Later the order was given to take the UKRAINE. I was called to him to present my plan for the attack on MOSCON onco again. And once again I tried to change his mind. At that time he still could control higgelf sufficiently to listen to me and let me finish my story. Once more I pictured the vital importance of NCSCO, to us and explained to him, that if we could capture MCSCO. in the early fall toward the end of September, we could cut Russia in two parts. And then so could still decide shether to occupy the Southern or the Northern half first. That was the purely military angle of the affair. Now let us consider the political angle, which was equally important. It was believed that the STALIN regime would brook down politically. But in order to bring this regime to a collapse it was necessary to occupy MOSCOW. We should have pursued a policy of convincing the Russian people that they would got a better deal if they cooperated with us. We should not have eaid, as we did: "We shall cut Rusoia into omall pieces. We chall divide it and make a German colony out of it." Thus the Russians, even those who were against STALIN, the Unite Russians, said: "No. oo won't have that." This was our great political error. The decision to take the UKRAINE first, which resulted in the unouccosoful winter compaign against MOSCOW, and the miaguided policy toward the Russian people--these two were the reasons why we did not find the mecessary support among the population, nor the military strength to finish this campaign as quickly as pecalible. And this was so emsential, because there still was an undefeated enemy in the West. On top of everything, Japan and America came to grips, and we thought we might have to enter that conflict too. So we issued a new declaration of war, which added America to the side of our enemies. I don't know the reasons for this last decision. But I was at the front, commanding my army, and thus couldn't familiarine sysolf with every detail.

(Re: Way KIEV was taken first and not MOSCOW)

- GUD: I conformed with the FUZIMER twice about this question; once on 3 Aug and once on 23 Aug. At that time the general staff, too, was in favor of attacking MUSCON first.
- GETH: When the PANZER Army GUDERIAN finally did attack, we had a temperature of 35 deg (C) below and an icy wind..... At that time the only way to employ armored divisions was to gather the tanks of a master of different divisions. That whome how fow tanks we had left. There was no time for repairs, nor did we have the necessary equipment and spere parts. .y cun division, which I had led up to that campaign, was reduced to 12 tanks at 1.05COV.

INTERMODATING OFFICER: Now high do you octimate the casualties at that time?

GUD: During the winter campaign of 1941 they were not too high. Our principal losses were caucod through the cold. But to be honest, our casualties weren't abnormally high until we came to STALINGRAD. Those were our first catactrophic losses. Then we had these terrific envelopments. We had some 300,000 casualties there, From then on, with these continued envelopments of large units, we suffered our first irreplacable losses. That as also where the Gerlan soldier's morale started its downward slide. There he lost his sense of invincibility. Our men took part in practically every attack, without complaint. But in this final compaign we no longer could attack. None of our attacks succeeded. And before that, not even our most difficult attacks failed.

(Re: Count VON SCHULINSUNG)

- GOD: He was a mative of MOSCOU, went to school there, and was said to or exceedingly well acquainted with the country. From a military point of view, he was eas of the best authorities on Russian tastica, and in addition to that he had very good connections in Russian military circles. I knew that for a certainty. He operated just like a Russian. The Russians were more open and more friendly toward him than they were toward most preigners. Thus we always were well informed. Mobody can say that his reports were incorrect, but no one would believe them.
- GUD: If fewer of our outstanding strategists had been diamissed in 1943 and at the end of 1941, we would have fought an entirely different war. I myself, was relieved of my commend on the basis of a false report which a senior general had made about me. In Jun 1942, after returning from Russia, I demanded an investigation by a military court. It was my intention to have the facts straightened out. My request was not granted. In the case of another general, an investigation was also refused. One general filed a suit, which, however, was not carried through. In the following spring a law was passed which suspended the regular courts. Thus the dictatorship was firmly entrenched in the army. From then on it was impossible to file a suit, or to demand a trial. Later, when the law was intensified, it even became impossible to resign. My predecessor as Chief of the General Staff handed in his resignation five times, but it was never accepted. When I was assigned to the General Staff without being consulted about the assignment. I was received with these words: "I do not want you to start out by tendering your resignation. It wouldn't be granted anyway. It is up to me (HITLER) whether you stay im your office of not—your viches are of no consequence. I alone as responsible for what happens—not you!"

II. THE INVASION

10: There is a sharp difference between the tank battles on the Eastern front, and those of the Western front. Those in the EAST were always on a larger scale.

GETR: That is just what we wanted. We wanted to spore our tanks, in order to be able to engage the Americans and the English in a real fight where we could put our experiences of the Enstern front to good use. I was of a different opinion than RO.KEL. I expected your landing to be successful. The Anglo-Saxon world had prepared itself for a landing--and we could not stop the guns of the Anglo-American fiset and its aircover with merely a few mines. The troops would simply walk ashore. There was our one chance to engage the Allies in a real tank battle, while PATTON was still assembling his units. It would have been a boon to my old days, if I had another chance to fight with the divisions I had trained myself. But fate wouldn't have it so.... BOSEEL's armoved divisions were largely dispersed, and under constant AT fire.

- IO: But it was almost 2 months after the invasion before PATTON broke through at AVRANCIES.
- GETR: Shat made our mistake a Carce cae yet.
  - IO: He fereed you into a very small pocket.
- OETR: That is the reason why I was relieved. After CHERSCURG was taken, everyone realised, including MARSCHALL RUNDSTEDT that the CAES bridge head would have to be vacated. I proposed that in order to save the armored divisions, so that I could let them get some rest and then commit them on the left flank. Every would-be officer realised that the Americans would come down from CHERSCURG to break through our 7th Army positions. I had the divisions (to stop them) but was not permitted to employ them in this manner.
  - IO: It was too late, even then. We already had CHERDOUVS.
- GETE: There was slim chance of success. But our chances would have been much better at AVENECHES. At that time you could have been defeated.
  - IO: I still remember that there were arrored divisions opposing us. And we always wondered when they would be segmitted.

- GETR: I can tell you exactly, which divisions I had in stort for you. The 17 SS Division and the division "DAS REICH," a first rate outfit, were reserved for the Americans. Then we had saved for you the "LEISTABLETE" and "HITIERJUGEND" divisions and large components of the 21 Armored and the 5 Armored. That was nuite a far cry from the everstrained 17 Division. They were a brave new unit, more or less the only ones in the 7 Army sector who fought brilliantly. Besides that there were a few Dedium-sized armored units which did not belong to the 7 Army sector.
- HAUSSEN: There was also the LENR division. It was further back, on the right flank.
  - GETR: According to the original plan, tho (PALLER) LEHR division was not to be committed. But I could not withdraw it from the vicinity of BAYEUX except by vecating the CAEN bridgehead. That bridgehead was no longer of any use to us anyway. The time for throwing the British from the bridgehead back into the sea had long passed. It was only a matter of helding a few plain fields.... Unfortunately I was not to have the pleasure of crossing swords with General PATTON. I really would have enjoyed that. It was beyond me, why we could not have committed a PANZER army in this decisive battle against your forces. Then at least we would have fought on an even basis.
  - GETR: The situation at CAEN was as follows: On the morning after the attack there were but 300 men left with the surviving commander of the division which had been hit on the coast! That is what I found when I took over two days I ter, having missed the beginning. The remainder of the division has been destroyed by the allied warships of which you know more than I do. But I know how effective they are! And them no one wanted to believe us when we told than how far inland the gums of these warships could fire. They just wouldn't believe our reports. There I had but one reply: Gentlemen, just stand there for a while and you'll find out how far they can fire."
  - GUD: In our reports to headquarters these and many other descriptions were simply set believed. That was our hard luck. Our misfortune in this war, one of many, was that the majority of our leading personalities mover had any front line commands during the war. When it was reported, for example, that the British fleet was outside CAEN, that they eguld fire as far as 30 km island, and that therefore it would be senseless to leave our armored divisons within the range of their artillery—someone would eimply maintain that they couldn't fire that far. And they would claim next, that just these last 3 or 5 km would make all the difference. The people who made these statements mover took an active part in the war themselves. They got all their experience at sessions excumi conference tables.
  - 10: We could not understand why the investor in the South of France succeeded so easily. You must have been prepared. After all, you had daily recommissance missions ever Corsica, North Africa, and Italy. You must have supported comothing. And you must have seen our boats which were on recommissance patrol along the coast.

- GUD: The reason for this lies in our peculiar evaluation of defensive strength, which is indicative of our strategy during the last year of this war. It was purely a strategy of lines (LINEAR-STRATEGIE). Our system of fortifications was arranged along a number of lines. First the WESTWALL, which was only one line for all practicall purposes. The line behind it had not been completed. Then the ATLANTIK-WALL was built, again nothing but one line. And this was the line in which all available divisions were committed. When it was suggested to assemble our armored divisions behind it, as a mobile reserve which could be used to oppose an attack, regardless of where it may come from we were tolds 'No, they would be too late, everything will have to be thrown into the front line." ROUSEL was the main proponent of this strategy.
- IO: How is it, that ROMMEL favored such a theory? He should have learned his lesson is North Africa.
- GUD: ROLLEL was the principal proponent of this theory in France. Later on KLUGE followed suit. And it was impossible for me to do anything against it. A fortress such as ANTWERP, for example, was not utilized. It had neither ammunition or armament worth mentioning. That was the worst blunder we could possibly have made. And we did not fortify PARIS! Nor did we repair the fortresses VERBUN, EPINAL, MELFORT, META, or STRASSBURG so that they could be used. We simply had two lines: the ATLANTIKWALL—which was expected to fail like any other installation of its kind wherever the enemy would attack; and then the WEST-ALL—another line which was expected to succurb wherever the enemy would concentrate all his efforts.
  - B: ROMARL and I were at odds about this for rany months. Then General GUDERIAN himself came to France in order to back me up. But unfortunately it was impossible to achieve anything.
- GUD: I was sent to RO. MEL for that particular purpose. But HITLER told se: "I can't tell the Fieldmarshal in command how to run his business."
  - H: We knew exactly, even before the invasion started, that the ratio of allied arrored rech cars (PAN ERSPAEH.AGEN) to ours was 15 to 1; tanks, 10 to 1; and planes, 30 or 50 to 1. And in view of this situation our only hope for victory lay with nobile warfare.
- GETR: RCLAMEL was a fairly good tactician, but he didn't have the faintest "ides about strategy."
- GUD: RCAMEL was excellent as high up as a corps commander. He was a first rate divisional commander, because he was courageous, went to the front, and participated is everything. But later, when he commanded an army, using the same technique, he lacked the vision which is essential for such a task. You know, it takes time to learn to lead large and fast armored units. And RG. EL was not a tank expert. After all, you can't suddenly replace years of schooling by intuition. RCLMEL lost good of his nerve in Africa.
- IO: What do you think of our General PAT? ON?
- GUD: General PATTON did what we would have liked to have done and what we used to do. He was very fact, which could already be seen in HOR-MANDY. I was with the FUEHRER when PATTON's drive started. He said:

"That is nothing but the shameless during of a few tanks. Our Generals never could have done that." I told him that our breaking through the French Maginot line toward the Atlantic coastline had proceeded in the same manner. Our breakthrough to the Swiss border, our closing of the Russian pocket, both were based on the same principle. A tank commander who doesn't lead recklessly can never be successful. Fate gives him just a few minutes or a few hours in which to do his stuff.

- GUD: The coordination of your air force with your armored force in the Lorraine campaign was so outstanding, that I immediately included these American tactics into the curriculum of our armored forces' school at MERGEN.
- GEYR; Even earlier than that, in NC:MANDY, we could distinctly recognize the American spearheads by the planes which circled over them continually in order to clear the way -- und which gave us no end of trouble. Did you know that the TI. ES (London Times) gave us the clue as to the length of time for which American armored divisons would not be liable to attack! I saw the article myself where the censor missed it, and I also showed it to MAPSCHALL SUNDSTEDT. I knew the TLES very well, and therefore read it very thoroughly. If you know the British we'l, you'll know that not one of them rends the first or second page of a paper -- including their censors. They begin with the middle. Since I am very much interested in English I discovered on the second page -- among reading matter, ..... notices of the pork market and agricultural news -- a short report of a meeting between representatives of American armored units, the War Office, and landholders, dealing with negotiations for maneuver . areas for American armored divisions. Speeches were made, warning the landowners that they would have to expect quite a lot of damage, since the maneuvers were to be primarily night operations. All this was printed in the TIMES, as well as the fact that the divisions would not arrive before 15 Feb, if I remember the date correctly. We could deduce from that, how long it would take you to got ready for an invasion.
  - B: Right after the investion started, and when the FUEHREN complained because we hadn't pushed the Americans into the sea, I emplained to him that I couldn't make up with my armored contigents alone for the failure of the Bavy and the Air Force.

III. MISCELLANY

GEYR: I was deeply grieved when I heard that AISACE was definitely to become French. ALSACE is German soil--IORRAINE is French. I was hoping that there was the possibility of a compromise using the U.S.A as an intermediary, and that the decision might be postponed for the time being. After all, no true German can ever forget AISACE.

Twice, Germany treated the Alsatians aukwardly. The first time after 1870 and again this time. The point at present is not to incorporate AISACE into Germany. It would be a better policy, if the Alsatians would have a neutral administration like that of the United States for a few years, and were then given the chance to hold a plebiscite..... Therefore it was considered good news, that the SAAR territory was to be under Arcrican jurisdiction. He European can be unbiased about those questions, not a not the heatish. The idea of a "Salance of Power" is of prime importance to the Englishman. There was a bitter struggle between ENER's and Sa. Uhi SCARE's schools of thought concerning this point. England under her present leadership is not in the position to be as impartial toward furopean problems as the United States would be. One must look at this realistically. A farreething and fair solution of Europe's economic problems is possible only up or the leadership of the United States.

(An : MCHAU)

- GUD: We can't understand that. Even our own carrie was affected. The chief of my operational department was in MCMAV. I never got any news from him. My wife couldn't atter a wid, or she, too, would have been sent to DACHAV. To know of a few of these darry affairs in the concentration camps.
- 10s Couldn't you go there youself?
  - GVD: No, that was impossible.....WILED was responsible for all the atrotities.
- GETR: I was with RISSEITROP for one year as a military attache. I only stayed with him out of a sense of Juty. He was no professional diplomat who knew his business. He had lived it Canada for a while, and thought that the British were just like the lenadians. But they are quite different—you can't compare the trainations. And guided by his ignorance he believed that he understood the English people.
- Wile In the Summer of '43 and the hall of '44 our generals explained to our Poreign Minister that a two-front war would be impossible. The frent in the Bast could be held only if the Agt could be pacafied.

  We would have to be free on one side. I presented these ideas not only to the Poreign Minister, but also to the PVEMACR. It was impossible to get them to consider these questions seriously.
- OFD: During the Polick compaign, the FVENROR was with me, only 50 meters behind the front line--he was still with me in France--but never in Bassia.
- 10: Be would stay around as long as everything went well, but no longer.
- OFF: That was not the reason-he left because he had to fly South. Only a few weeks age he was still with some divisional headquarters near the OFFE. He was not to be blamed himself; the FVERHER was no covard. But the fault lay with his friends, who kept him more and more in the dark, without themselves knowing anything about worfare. Too bad he didn't follow my advice to join his men. However, his health wasn't up to standard anymore. There actually were some men in his circle, ren of Sepreme Headquarters such as JCDL, ZEIT LER or JCR-MANN, who never came anywhere near the front.

GEYR: At loast SEITSLER commanded a Corps at one time.

- H: But he never loft his headquarters to go forward. He never came closer to the front than his corps headquarters. I remember him from the French campaign with the PANJERGRUPPE KLEIST, where he was man my superior. Not once during the entire campaign did he come to my headquarters.
- GUD: I never heard anyone present a viewpoint at the FUEHRER HQ which differed from that of the FUEHRER.
- 10: That is not what GOERING told us. He claimed that he had numerous quarrels with HITLER about the employment of the air force.
- GDDs That is unquestionably true. They argued at every meeting...but those were onesided arguments.
