(U//~~ATUO~~) Dow Jones & Company, as publishers of the Wall Street Journal, submitted a FOIA request for records sufficient to show communication between the United States Government and the Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency (SAMA), or any other Saudi Arabian government agency, concerning the monitoring by SAMA or any other banking authority of bank accounts associated with three particular Saudi - related financial entities. In early 2002, the Wall Street Journal published an article alleging that accounts belonging to the three named entities were included on a post 9/11 list the USG provided to SAMA for monitoring. In asking for this information, the requester, an Associate General Counsel for Dow Jones indicated that the Journal's reporter had a number of sources for the information in question, but that disclosure of those sources could be quite difficult.
