1. When [ ] stated, as reported in last reference, that all relevant facts in this case available to JACKPOT had been passed to us, he did not know that the records previously forwarded through this station to Headquarters cannot now be located and that a start from scratch is necessary. This station was not aware of this situation until so informed by [ ] during his recent visit.

2. It would be rather a large order to ask JACKPOT to reproduce and pass to us now all records available to JACKPOT on this case, except those sent to Headquarters with first reference. Instead, I propose that our station file on this case be compared with JACKPOT's file; that significant records missing from our file be reproduced and added thereto, and that this station then send our file as completed to Headquarters. I have explained the present situation to [ ] and made the above proposal to him. He has agreed to this solution. We shall proceed on this line unless Headquarters disapproves.
