in Sov. Publication, and on

In the Soviet publication "Bluzhdayushchiye Teni" By Grigoriy AKSELOD, Kazakhstan Publishing House, Alma-Ata, 1964, there is an interesting passage about Boris LEVITSKIY's friend, Mikhail KORZHAN. During the press conference on 2 April 1962, in East Berlin, Osip VERGUN, former active member of the OUN and presumed Soviet agent, revealed the following:

"During World War II, VERGUN was an officer of the fascist intelligence group 'ABWEHR-102' which was operating in the Ukraine. In 1947, VERGUN was recruited by the GEHLEN organization and for a long time operated in Austria and Western Germany. During the press conference, VERGUN named some agents known to him from the BANDERA organization who were sent to the U.S.A. and Canada with the mission to spy. The leaders of the OUN, LEMKAVSKIY and STETSKO took a trip there. STETSKO used documents under the name of a writer, Vasilii DANKIV who lived in Munich. In 1958, with the assignment of B.N.D. the Banderite journalist Vladimir LEMIK paid a visit to the U.S.A. A trip to Canada was taken by Ivan KASHUBA, Chief of the SB."

"To some of their agents, the B.N.D. gave orders to cooperate with other capitalist intelligence and counterintelligence... As it was revealed by VERGUN, with the French counterintelligence cooperated Ivan POPOVICH, member of the right wing of the trade union and a leader of the banderites in France, Boris VETUSHINSKIY. With the CIA cooperated Mikhail KORZHAN, former 'ABWEHR' resident in the Polish town Sanok." (Page 74)

published an article entitled: "Sixteenth October" by Mikhail KORYAKOV. The article described a panic in Moscow during 15-17 October 1941 when the German troops approached Moscow. While reviewing the writings of the Soviet writers about the panic in Moscow in those days, KORYAKOV mentioned one Soviet writer, Margarita VETLIN. VETLIN was an American by birth and came to the USSR in 1932 as a tourist where she was married to Andrey YEFREMOV, a theater producer. Together with her husband and her two children, she was evacuated from Moscow. She wrote a book "Po russkim dorogam" about her experiences during the evacuation. In her book, she revealed that she was talking with her friend Svetlana <sup>CHERNYY</sup> who was the wife of a writer, Boris CHERNYY.
