Henry:

Karamessines called [redacted] He stated that he had located a small, modest apartment with a living room, bath and kitchen on [redacted] which he believes best meets our needs. He has looked at more elaborate arrangements, to include office suites, but has been unable to find one which did not have a doorman and security which would risk compromise.

His solution has the advantage of an immediate walk-in from the street, no doorman, a one-floor move on an elevator with no operator and direct access to the apartment. He said, unfortunately, there is no separate entrance and that the only way to use the apartment is to have the two counterparts arrive separately. He would have several operators at the site to insure that the two counterparts proceed directly from the curb into the building and up into the elevator with minimum disturbance.

Karamessines also stated that in his view the rendezvous should occur after dark. He needs an okay from you to proceed with the arrangements which would include decorating the apartment and providing drinks and amenities which would be available for the guests. I told him to stay in a holding pattern pending confirmation that this was acceptable.
