Japan Editorial Comments Newspaper Week For some time there has been considerable speculation on what Deputy Prime Minister OGATA intends in an alleged expansion of the Cabinet Research Office. During some of the war years, OGATA was chief of the Cabinet Information Board, which under the guise of an information coordinating agency actually came to be a government censorship unit. Press commentators fear that the Deputy Prime Minister may be thinking of some such organization in his contemplated enlargement of the Cabinet Research Office. They point out that government interference with freedom of the press failed miserably during the war....
