1. [] has no independent sources of evaluation of the overall QKACTIVE propaganda program in Brazil. (Since the ALRACY project was terminated, we have not been in frequent operational contact with the two [] assets in that project who are shown as recipients of QKACTIVE material.) However, we believe there is a need for the type of output by QKACTIVE described in Reference, but believe that the current situation requires a different type of material from what may have been effective in the period prior to the Revolution. With the immediate danger of Communism in this country now relieved, the need no longer exists to arouse the mass of the population to strong emotional hostility to communism and the Soviet bloc. Rather a low keyed, well reasoned effort to portray the weaknesses and the contradictions of the communist system is more than ever needed here, particularly aimed at the intellectuals, the students and the political leftwing.

2. QKFLOWAGE informs us that the two books mentioned in Reference A, which were translated and published here by QKFLOWAGE, received satisfactory acceptance. Both were published some months before the Revolution. Rebelleião... was attacked on three separate occasions by the far leftist, Goulart supporter Ultima Hora, which QKFLOWAGE regarded as testimony to its having hit a vulnerable mark. It is noted, however, that in both of these cases, the Brazilian publisher chose to alter the titles of the books from their English counterparts. The [] received a small number of copies of both these titles from QKFLOWAGE, in accordance with an arrangement we have with QKFLOWAGE here, and passed them to selected contacts. The reception was good.

3. The list of media outlets listed in the Attachment to Reference A is spotty in quality, and does not at all constitute a representative group. It is assumed, however, that Identity 1 made it a part of his objective during his recent visit to Brazil at least to lay the ground for improving his outlets.
