Excerpt of pertinent information:

1. Emil Ghilezan informed Source that he has at all times maintained a cordial and close relationship with General Nicolae Radescu, in an effort to unify Rumanian groups abroad. He had little success in Europe, and, upon arrival in the United States, contacted Brutus Coste, knowing that Coste was very close to General Radescu. He and Coste succeeded in convincing the General that the Rumanian National Committee must be largely composed of members of the political parties. Radescu insisted that such a Committee must also include individuals chosen by him, such as Carlos Davila and Viriol Tilea.

2. According to Ghilezan, a sharp conflict will develop over Davila and Tilea, since they are unacceptable to the political parties. . .

This is all the pertinent information on subject in this document.
