3.3(b)(1)

-- The apparent disappearance of the Argentine ambassador to Venezuela while visiting Buenos Aires this week adds yet another incident to the picture of continuing political violence in Argentina. A wave of abductions involving eleven persons--eight lawyers and three of their wives--occurred in Mar del Plata earlier this month. Three of those abducted were subsequently released, but one lawyer has been found dead. Responsibility for these kinds of acts is undetermined, but [redacted] they are usually the work of hardline right-wing groups of military and civilian officials--especially in the security services--who want to embarrass the relatively moderate Videla government.
