3. Liaison to Other Japanese Intelligence Groups.
e. TSUJI Masanobu was politely refused admission to the group (SATOMI) in the first week of January, 1951 despite his continued interest. The excuse used was that the publicity concerning TSUJI's celebrated book about his exploits in Southeast Asia after the war and the overt nature of his efforts to aid re-birth of Nationalism had made him too well known a figure. Inclusion of such a figure in their group would merely serve to spotlight their very quietly hidden activities. SATOMI remarked further that ARISUE's recent activities since the failure of JIS groups to merge underground have only drawn him closer to the Popov camp; in ARISUE's case this is merely self-interest because ARISUE has now reached the point where he has no future except under protection of Popov and/or related agencies and must operate now on their behalf fairly sincerely in order to retain their trust...and the vitally needed support. Neither KAWARE nor his subordinates or IWAAZE is in such a position. In TSUJI's case SATOMI feels that that former ultra-militarist has childishly sold himself on his own propaganda (that Japan and America must work
