① EL SALVADOR: Insurgent Attacks Continue

1-3

The guerrillas, by destroying a key road bridge last Sunday, have reduced access to the northwest corner of the country. They also continue to harass military units and to sabotage the electrical power and communications systems. In addition, the insurgents' propaganda radio station has resumed broadcasting after being forced off the air for nearly three weeks when their equipment was captured by government forces. Supply shortages are preventing the insurgents from mounting larger scale operations, however, and the government has been able to restore electricity to the eastern third of the country, where it had been cut off.
