identifies and summarizes key points in longer vernacular items. At this level, the level I OSO officer also begins to synthesize the key points of multiple items into a cohesive informational product. Working closely with more experienced officers, the Level I OSO is a member of a virtual, international team of foreign national staff, contract translators and US staff.

With guidance, the Level I OSO officer becomes familiar with the media environment and socio-economic context in which the media operate for a particular country or region by reading media characterizations, media guides, web reference reports, source descriptors, commentator profiles, and other media analysis products.

With guidance, the Level I OSO conducts basic Internet searches and exploits foreign media databases. The Level I OSO may assign, monitor and/or evaluate foreign national employees or contractors.
